Mettler, David L.

State Board of Finance,

Hi, I have some home station per diem reimbursement requests for a Geology field camp course at the South Dakota School of Mines and Technology. We need these forms approved for the direct billing of these expenses. All of the employees teaching the course ate on campus with students and some also stayed at the dorms with students. The meals were $27 a day and the dorm rooms were $30 a night. Attached is the flyer for the field camp and the signed request forms.

Thank you.

GEOL - 410 Field Geology

July 13 – July 29 Black Hills - South Dakota and Wyoming

GEOL 410 Field Geology - Six semester credits (3 credits camp & 3 credits online)

Cost: $4,395.00 for consortium members and $4,795 non-consortium. Deposit of $300 is due at registration. Includes tuition, all fees, food and transportation from Rapid City. Course is limited to 30 students.

- Important dates: Monday, July 13 at 8:00 AM Meet at SDSM&T. If you are arriving on Sunday, please let us know so we can arrange for lodging. Wednesday, July 29 - end . of camp - students leave at 12:00 noon. Each week comprises six days of work with Sundays free for individual activities. Some optional Sunday field trips are planned for students unfamiliar with the Black Hills.
- Location: SDSMT
- Introduction: The scenic Black Hills of South Dakota and Wyoming provide the setting of world-class geology for the course. Students will map Precambrian metamorphic, Phanerozoic sedimentary and Tertiary igneous rocks to better understand the complex geologic evolution of the Black Hills uplift from the Trans-Hudson orogeny to the post-

Laramide deposition sediments that make up the Badlands area east of the Black Hills as well as in the Slim Buttes area of northwestern South Dakota.

- Projects: Students will measure, describe and correlate stratigraphic sections to gain familiarity with Paleozoic and Mesozoic formations of the Black Hills region. The weekly mapping projects, involving different rock types and undertaken at various scales, provide interesting geologic insight to the major stages of the Black Hills uplift. The second week project begins with the mapping of a structure with inclined sedimentary rocks. The third week project involves the mapping of igneous rocks and how they may have affected the overlying and surrounding rocks. The fourth week involves the mapping of sedimentary rocks with complex structural/tectonic elements. These exercises will emphasize the preparation of stratigraphic columns in addition to geologic maps, structural cross sections and the completion of formal geologic reports.
- Prerequisites: Completion of junior year of study, Physical Geology, Mineralogy, Igneous/Metamorphic Petrology, Stratigraphy/Sedimentation and Structural Geology, or consent of the Director.
- Course objectives: In addition to standard Brunton compasses, students will utilize GPS for detailed mapping using aerial photographs and topographic base maps. The skills and technical knowledge gained in this course are applicable to environmentally related problems in addition to practical applications in mineral resources and hydrogeology, for example.
- Physical demands: Field work will involve working off-trail in semi-rugged to rugged terrain and may include hikes of some length. Students should be both physically and mentally prepared and comfortable with steep terrain.
- Climate: Summer weather with mostly sunny days with temperature ranges of highs from the 70s-80s to the 100s with typically low humidity and lows from the 60s to the 70s at night.
- Facilities: Lodging for the duration of the course will be at the SDSM&T dormitory in Rapid City, SD. Students will need to supply their own bedding (sheets, pillowcase, blanket for a single bed or sleeping bag as well as towels, wash cloth, etc.).
- Required textbook: Latest edition (1985) of Compton's "Geology in the Field" is required. Available at the SDSM&T bookstore and on Amazon as hard cover or e-book ($19).
 - Field Clothing /Equipment /Drafting ect: EQUIPMENT LIST
