Increasing Preventive and Primary Care

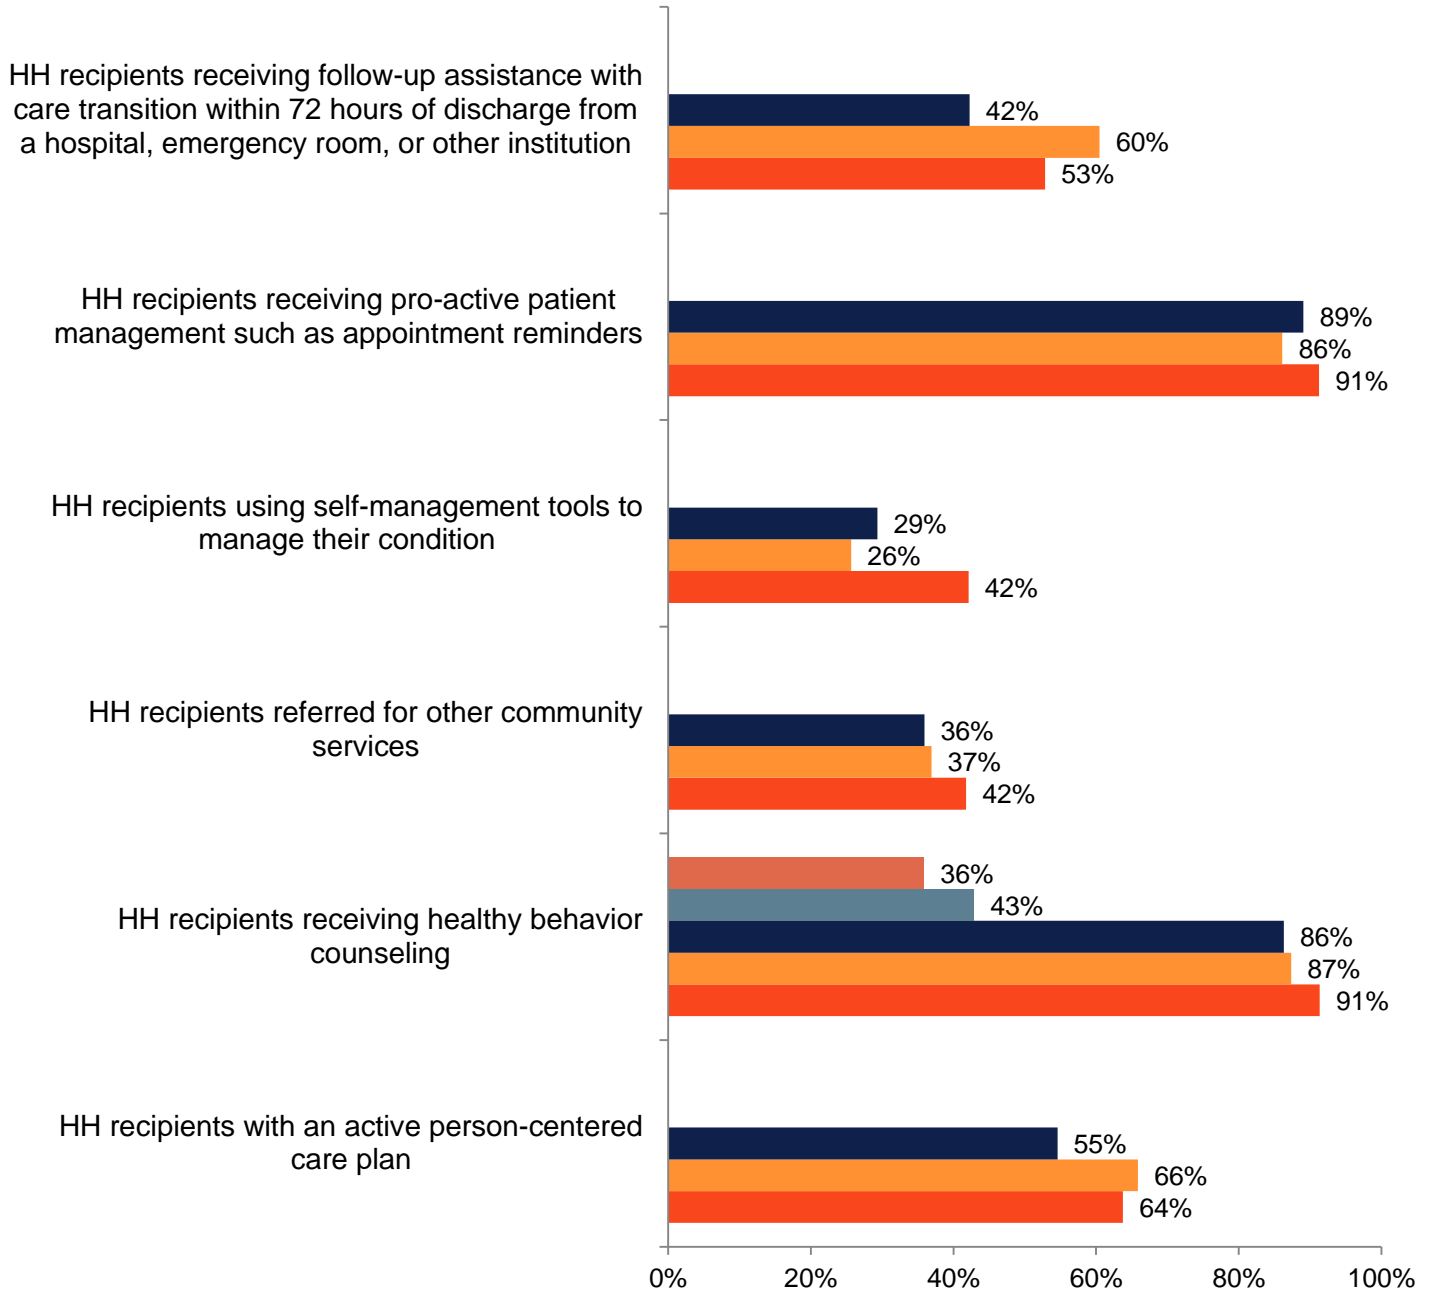

Health Homes participants have high-cost chronic and/or behavioral health conditions. The goal of Health Homes is to provide care in primary care settings and help participants effectively manage their conditions by increasing preventive care. Overall, primary care has increased by 6%. The measures below show health homes success in increasing preventive screenings.

Transforming Care

South Dakota Medicaid's Health Homes is changing the way Medicaid recipients receive care by creating a person-centered care team to meet the needs of the patient. The following measures show how the health home is changing the way individuals receive care.

Improving Patient Experience

Health Homes are tasked with focusing care on the person, including establishing a relationship with health home participants. A positive patient experience helps support the health home model, leading to better continuity of care and better health outcomes. Outcomes in this area are split between primary care clinics and community mental health centers.

Improving Clinical Outcomes

By transforming care, increasing preventive services, and improving the patient experience, Health Homes are able to improve clinical outcomes for patients. The following measures show how clinical outcomes have improved for individuals the longer the individual participates in the program.

A 50-year-old recipient enrolled in the Health Home program since December 2013 has improved health significantly as part of participating in the Health Home program. The recipient's starting weight was 245 with a BMI of 44.7, and is now down to 129 pounds with a BMI of 23.3. The recipient makes all dental and eye appointments as well as yearly wellness exams. This has reduced the recipient's cholesterol to the point they were able to stop one medication. The recipient has significantly reduced their smoking and is working towards quitting.

Cost Effectiveness of the Health Home Program

Analysis of Health Home participant utilization, claims and outcomes show significant progress in achieving cost savings and efficiency for the Medicaid program.
